NEW ZEALAND PROFILES

General Editor: DR. JOHN SALMOND

Dr Salmond of Victoria University of Wellington edits a series of small biographies of New Zealanders who have contributed politically, artistically, socially, or historically, to the growth of their country. These books will be essential as supplementary material for the New Zealand section of the School Certificate History course. While written primarily for secondary schools, they will be highly authoritative, will incorporate the latest research material and will therefore be useful as quick reference material for University Students. Illustrated throughout, often with previously unpublished photographs.

THE WHITE ENSIGN IN EARLY NEW ZEALAND

Rear-Admiral J. O'C. ROSS

This book is in two parts. The first deals with British naval operations in the Maori Wars and the second deals with the development of the Naval base Calliope from the Maori Wars through two World Wars up to the present day. Illustrations include hitherto unpublished material for the Maori War period and some later material on the base. Of interest to all students of New Zealand history, especially of the Maori Wars.
