Current and forthcoming 1970 publications include

A MAORI COMMUNITY IN NORTHLAND: DR. P. W. HOHEPA
Based on Dr. Hohepa's MA thesis, this study of the small Maori community of Waima in the upper reaches of the Hokianga Harbour is absorbing reading for all students of the Maori people. Limp covers $1.95

TE TOHUNGA: W. DITTMER
A limited facsimile edition of the book first published in 1907, this is a remarkably illustrated interpretation of Maori myths and legends. A gifted and highly individual artist, Dittmer lived with a Maori tribe at the beginning of the century, totally identifying himself with his hosts. 10 x 12½in., 120 pages, many illustrations, slip-case. $15.00

WELLINGTON HARBOUR: D. R. NEILSON
The development of Wellington as a port, described and illustrated by a leading New Zealand landscape painter. Based on research in the archives of the Wellington Harbour Board, this is a handsome volume that gives a fascinating record of the ships, buildings and personalities involved in the harbour's growth. 10½ x 10½in., 124 pages and illustrations, 12 pages of colour plates, slip-case.

Standard Edition $9.50
De Luxe Edition $19.50

WHEN STEAM WAS KING: W. W. STEWART
A definitive, illustrated study of the steam locomotive in New Zealand, from 1863 to the present day. Every variation of Australian, English, American and New Zealand locomotive is fully documented. 10½ x 10½in., 144 pages, 54 paintings (32 in colour), 119 photographs, 22 diagrams.

Non-white Immigration and the ‘White Australia’ Policy

H. I. London

Australia’s image as an Asian state is largely predicated on the goodwill she can encourage as a result of student exchange, foreign aid and technical assistance, military aid and an immigration programme that is not offensive to her Asian neighbours. This book evaluates the significance of recent changes in non-European immigration policy and contributing factors. It examines those groups desirous of maintaining the status quo and those pressuring for further modification of the policy. The author has analysed the changing nature of Australia’s foreign policy and the manifestation of recent strategic commitments in immigration policy decisions.

336 pages $A7.00

Australia and the Colonial Question at the United Nations

W. J. Hudson

Decolonization has posed acute problems for Australia, first, because it has transformed her political environment from an umbrella of submerged colonial societies to a collection of volatile independent states and, second, because it has affected her own colonial position in strategically sensitive Papua and New Guinea. In the setting of the United Nations this book examines the Australian diplomatic response to the phenomenon of decolonization, to the alienation of Western authority in Africa, the Middle East, Asia, and Oceania.

228 pages $A6.00

Cook the Writer

J. C. Beaglehole

The Endeavour voyage was not only a ‘Remarkable Occurrence’ and an astonishing achievement, but it was also the last part of Cook’s apprenticeship in, as well as mastery of, discovery — and in reporting on discovery, for on that voyage Cook learned how to shape his experience into words. The 6th Wood Memorial Lecture.

24 pages Paper $A0.60

Lucius Sulla: the Deadly Reformer

E. Badian

The story of Lucius Cornelius Sulla (138-78BC) is the familiar one of the ruthless adventurer and sinister tyrant transformed by success into a revered statesman. Interest is added by the nature of the sources, which have bedevilled the study of Sulla more than that of most Roman leaders of the Republic. The 7th Todd Memorial Lecture.
