Recent titles from the New History of England Series

Government and Community
England 1450-1509
J.R. Lander
A valuable statement of current knowledge of the fifteenth century, characterised for far too long as a 'worn-out, helpless age'. It is fitting that the opening volume of the series should demonstrate so well the nature of history and its capacity for constant reinterpretation and progress.

Aristocracy and People
Britain 1815-1865
Norman Gash
In his masterly interpretation, Professor Gash traces the stages by which the traditional governing classes of Britain, the landed aristocracy and gentry, successfully adapted themselves and the political system to the forces of rapid expansion and social change.
Boards $42.75, Paper $30.25, 384 pages.

Titles from the new Studies in Social and Demographic History Series

Bastardy and its Comparative History
Edited by Peter Laslett, Karla Oosterveen and Richard M. Smith
‘Laslett and the contributors to this meticulous and erudite collection of essays are consciously sparing on the theoretical aspects of their subject, love, sexual enjoyment, shame, scandal and moral judgements, in favour of the collation of hard data, critically examined. They have aimed at producing “the first source book on bastardy as a historical sociology” and have succeeded.’ The Sunday Times.
Boards $84.00, 448 pages.

The Population History of England 1541-1871
A Reconstruction
E.A. Wrigley and R.S. Schofield
Using a new technique, the authors of this work have reconstructed the population history of England during the 300 years before the major fall in birth and death rates in the late nineteenth century.
Boards $105.00 approx, 480 pages. Publication January 1981.
