DAVID MACKAY
Senior Lecturer in History, Victoria University of Wellington

A challenge to existing views on imperial expansion during the late eighteenth century, Dr Mackay's study draws together and articulates connections between trade, exploration and scientific knowledge, and examines the far-reaching influence of Sir Joseph Banks, long President of the Royal Society.

Hariru Wikitoria: An Illustrated History of the Maori Tour of England, 1863
by Brian Mackrell $29.95

An illustrated history of a very controversial tour. It offers a rare insight into the encounter of Maori and European worlds in the 19th Century.

Whakairo: Maori Tribal Art
by David Simmons $35.00

This is the first analysis of Maori carving styles ever written. This book describes and illustrates the subtle and profound differences between the carving styles of the tribes and examines the art of each tribal group.

Journal of a Rambler: The Journal of John Boultbee $TBA

Boultbee’s journal provides a vivid record of life in the Antipodes and Far East in the 1820s and early 1830s. The New Zealand material is of particular interest to historians and anthropologists — Boultbee’s Southern Maori glossary is probably unique.
