AWARDS IN ORAL HISTORY

The Awards provide financial help for projects using oral resources relating to the history of New Zealand/Aotearoa and this country's close connections with the Pacific. All areas of New Zealand history are eligible although preference will be given to projects which would significantly improve understanding of this country. Projects on the history of the Maori and Pacific Island peoples in New Zealand are especially welcome. Awards may be made to individuals, groups, communities or institutions. Assistance is not normally available for projects that are eligible for university research funds, nor for university theses. Applicants must normally be resident in New Zealand.

Awards are designed to:

- Provide support to individuals, groups, communities or institutions for a limited period
- Pay for equipment, travel and other costs related to the project

Applications close on 30 April 2005

in New Zealand /
Aotearoa*
Richard S. Hill

State Authority / Indigenous Autonomy *Crown–Maori Relations
in New Zealand / Aotearoa
1900–1950* Richard S. Hill

This book provides an urgently needed overview of Maori quests for rangatiratanga/autonomy in the first half of the 20th century, and the Crown's responses to them.

A Lifetime in Politics
The Memoirs of Warren Freer

Warren Freer entered parliament at the age of 26 in a 1947 by-election, and was the Labour MP for Mt Albert until his retirement in 1981. A Lifetime in Politics is his own account of those 34 momentous years.

New Zealand and the Soviet Union
1950–1991 A Brittle Relationship
A.C. Wilson

Some years after the demise of the Soviet Union and more than 50 years after New Zealand established a diplomatic post in Moscow, this book examines the interdependence which characterised the relationship.

The Mediator *A Life of Richard
Taylor 1805–1873* John Owens

Richard Taylor described himself as a man 'between two fires'. Born in Yorkshire in 1805, he arrived as a missionary in the Bay of Islands in 1839. The Mediator tells the story of a man who expected 'savages' and learned to reject the term.
