

Notes on Contributors

M.P.K. Sorrenson is an emeritus Professor of History at The University of Auckland, and a former editor of the New Zealand Journal of History. He was a member of the Waitangi Tribunal from 1996 to 2002. His publications have focused on Māori and African history.

Grant Phillipson specialises in Treaty history and religious history. He served as the Waitangi Tribunal's Chief Historian until his appointment as a member of the Tribunal in January 2011.

Rachel Patrick completed her MA, entitled 'Teaching the Storied Past: History in New Zealand Primary Schools, 1900 to 1940', at the University of Melbourne in 2009. She is a PhD candidate in the History programme at Victoria University of Wellington. Her current research explores aspects of the civilian experience of the First World War.

Matthew Cunningham is a PhD student in the History programme at Victoria University of Wellington. His thesis examines radical conservative movements in Australia and New Zealand during the Great Depression from a trans-national perspective.

Marianne Schultz, a former professional dancer, has an MA in Performing Arts from Middlesex University and an MLitt in History from The University of Auckland. She is a PhD candidate in the History department at The University of Auckland. Her research focuses on New Zealand's performing arts between the 1860s and 1940.