LABOUR'S PATH TO POLITICAL INDEPENDENCE

The Origins and Establishment of the New Zealand Labour Party 1900-1919

BARRY GUSTAFSON

The Labour Party emerged in New Zealand in the first two decades of the twentieth century as a response to political and economic change, and as moderates and militants learnt that they had more to gain by working together than by fighting one another. The story Barry Gustafson tells is of men and women, not impersonal structures; it is enhanced by a rich collection of photographs.
