

Correspondence

I am presently collecting material for a social history of dental care in New Zealand. I am particularly interested in anecdotal, historical and literary sources that will give me an insight into the early history of the popular culture of dentistry, together with material on early dental practice and the history of the school dental service from its founding to the post-war period.

References need not just be to professional journals or to books dealing specifically with dental matters. I would welcome any material.

Yours sincerely,

PETER DAVIS

*Department of Community Health & General Practice
School of Medicine
University of Auckland*