

For the First Time in 100 Years

Journal of The Polynesian Society Centennial Index 1892-1991

Compiled by Dorothy Brown

Founded in 1892 by a small band of amateur enthusiasts who considered it their duty to record the life and language of Maori and other Polynesian peoples, the Polynesian Society and its Journal grew in status and influence, and is now the longest-serving academic journal devoted to the scholarly study of the peoples of the Pacific.

Celebrating a century of published research, the Centennial Index documents the achievements and aspirations of a wide variety of professional and amateur scholars. The Index is a completely new work, and acknowledges by name the many Pacific Islander co-workers whose recorded or translated oral traditions were originally published under the name of the collector.

Quite simply, this is an indispensable and unrivalled reference work for all Pacific studies.
